INTRODUCTION

The following list of 487 persons, by families, is mainly the Index of a set of biographies of these Toll - Wolcott ancestors. The biographies have been typed and are collected in five loose-leaf volumes. As they might be useful to anyone who wishes to learn more about persons listed in this Index several facts about this set of biographies should be mentioned here.

At intervals during some twenty years the biographies were compiled by Charles H. Toll of Amherst, Mass. Most of the typed biographies are short; but in the whole set the lengths run from a brief paragraph to twenty pages or more. A bibliography is given for each. Many additions and corrections have been written into the original typed copy as more and better sources were found, and this process is being occasionally continued. A set of thin-paper carbons of the original typed pages is now (1961) in the Library of the New England Historical Genealogical Society, Ashburton Place, Boston. Later the revised copy is to take the place of the carbons there.

A family chart, in the concentric circle form, 27" x 30", was made about three years ago, and a copy is also in the Society's Library, with the large negative from which the chart was printed.

Each family name in the present Index is followed by a T if the family is in the Toll ancestry, and by a W if in the Wolcott ancestry. To make it easier to locate the segment of the chart in which a given family is to be found, each family name in the Index is also followed by the name of a person who is in that segment in the fifth generation, counting Charles H. Toll and Katharine E. Wolcott as the first generation. If there is a descent by more than one line from an early ancestor the Index shows two or more of these 5th circle names.

For many of the earlier persons the year of birth or of death is not known. In this Index when a date is given as "possibly ca." the date is guessed. Even a guessed approximate date, noted as such, is more useful than a blank.

The towns where these persons lived were in fact often large townships, and sometimes the part of the township where an early inhabitant lived is now called by a quite different town name. When such a case is found the present town name is given in parentheses after the name used in the early records.

In a relatively few cases there is some incidental evidence as to the ancestry of a given person though the relationship does not seem satisfactorily established. When the evidence is fairly strong the earlier name is given as "probably". When the evidence is more questionable, but still worth notice, the name is given as "possibly".

For the families which happened to form the earlier part of this set of biographies the names, dates, and items of personal history were generally copied from printed genealogies and periodicals which were found in several libraries. Excepting the Vital Records of New England towns, not much attempt was made to find sources. Many of the books and articles had been carefully worked out and are quite reliable, but some turned out to be undependable. In the later parts of this set more time was spent in looking up the printed text of early records, and also some manuscript probate papers and other original records. Errors were found in some of the printed genealogies which had been used, and doubtless more would be found by more study of sources. A couple of errors were found even in town Vital Records. It ought to be understood that quite a number of the items in this Index probably need correction.

Where the names of ancestors in Europe are known for one or more generations before an immigrant this is noted in the present Index; and in the typed biographies some of the easily available facts about a few of the pre-immigrants are given. But the main purpose has been to learn about the lives of the immigrants and of their descendants. Very little time has been spent on the few cases where a person in this Index has been claimed by some genealogist to have a long line of descent from notable families in Europe. Of course such a claim is extremely hard to verify. A very few of them seem to have survived a competent critical examination.

Connected accounts of the lives of a number of the men in the Index have been printed in various places, but the facts about the majority of them are found only in scattered references; and the women have been especially neglected by writers about the families. A good many of the biographies in this set may be the only ones which have been attempted.

As the longer biographies are likely to be of most interest for reference, the names of about 65 persons in the Index are followed by the number of pages in that biography. All those of 5 pages or more are included, and a few of only 4 pages, for special reasons.

These longer biographies are however of rather different kinds. Some of them deal at length with questions about material which needs to be evaluated. Some give not only the list of sources used, but also items supplied by each source. Some include several pages about contemporary events which affected the life of everyone in the community, as recounted in town histories and early records. Early witchcraft cases, the facts and the fiction about the regicides in Hadley, incidents in the wars with the Indians, certain court cases and penalties, the Covenant of a Puritan settlement, Eliot's Indian Bible, and so on, are included. But the main effort was of course to get a connected account of each person's life. Some of the material from wills is new; and a few court records were found which earlier writers had omitted.

Preceding the typed set of biographies there is also a section which deals with a number of other background topics which did not belong especially in any particular life; the evidence that the early English settlers did not build any log houses, Mrs. Rowlandson's long account of her experiences as a captive of King Philip's Indians, etc.

It may be well to explain that the set of biographies here indexed grew partly by chance out of an old family chart which showed rather more than half of these names. The chart gave dates of birth and death, but no other information came with it. Some of the blank areas on the chart looked much too large, and during one vacation several days were spent in a couple of libraries to see whether anything could be done toward filling in the spaces.

After a slow start it turned out that some of the lines could be carried farther, and especially that a good deal could be learned about the lives of some of the men and women who were mere names, or wholly unknown, on the chart. So the search was continued from time to time, without much system, and for a while with little knowledge of how to operate. A number of the lines on the old family chart went back to early immigrants; and a surprisingly large number of other early immigrants were found when other lines were followed back. The records showed that many persons in the early generations were among the original pioneers in various frontier settlements. Many of the men took an active part in the village or town government and in the Puritan churches. Some served as soldiers, and some were connected in different ways with the Colony administrations. The early history of New York and New England came to have a new and personal interest. Gradually the biographies included a good many facts, incidents, and personalities which our family had not known, and which one would wish to keep in the family records.

A single striking connection of old and new may be mentioned. One of the men in this Index, Claes Cornelise Swits, came to Manhattan Island about 1630, and later leased the large Turtle Bay farm; he was killed in his house there in 1641 by a marauding Indian; the location of this farm is known, the buildings of the United Nations stand on the eastern side of it.
